

Country: Russia Federation

Committee: UNESCO

Delegate: Ceren Atik

The Russian Federation has the largest surface area and according to the latest data, approximately 143 million people live in this large area. While some of the people living in this area are Russian, a significant portion are non-Russians. As its name suggests, Russia is a federation country and cooperates with other states. The Russian Federation wants the non-Russians and minorities living in it to live comfortably. And in the UNESCO committee we would like to draw attention to the better preservation of the cultures of minorities living in the Russian Federation.

Since Russia is a federal country, we think that the welfare of its people and living in harmony with their culture will have a positive impact on the country. In short, we will draw attention to these topics with the opportunity this committee has given us.
