Agenda Item:Women's medical negligence

Norway is a country located in Europe. Norway is a country of mountain ranges ,huge forests ,vast empty expanses and only about 3% arable land . Norway used to be a part of Denmark- Norway and from 1814 to 1905 it was in a personal union with Sweden. Norway is governed by a constitutional monarchy .Norway's capital city is Oslo .Norway is still making progress about reproductive health ,maternal care, access to healthcare and access to health policies. These efforts have been a beneficial factor in improving the welfare of women in the country.

One of the important elements of Norway is that it has a well-established healthcare system known for its high standards of care and patient safety. One of the important elements of Norway is that it has a well-established healthcare system known for its high standards of care and patient safety. If medical violations occur, Norwegian citizens can apply through the Norwegian legal system. If a medical error occurs, they have the right to claim compensation .Solutions Norway has found in the past were legislation and regulations ,healthcare training and standarts , quality assurance programs , patient advocacy and support , public awareness and education and lastly legal remedies and redress

Norway's policies about women's negligences are legal framework , healthcare standarts and guidelines , patient rights and advocacy , professional standarts and training , transparency and accountability. These policies are continually evaluated and updated to address emerging challenges and improve women's healthcare outcomes.
