

Country: Lebanon

Committee: Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC)

Topic: Promoting green jobs and the transition to a green economy.

As a nation situated at the crossroads of the Mediterranean and the Middle East, Lebanon is acutely aware of the vulnerabilities posed by climate change which threaten environmental, societal, and political stability. Despite our difficulties, Lebanon is a country where many of the trading depends on its cultivation of tobacco, cotton, fruit and many species of trees predominantly mulberry. What a country so rich in natural resources and green environment, considering the neighbouring countries, promoting a greener Lebanon not only in terms of the nature it surrounds but also of socio-economic life is of extreme importance.

Thus, Lebanon is dealing with a crisis of climate change which affects the whole world at the moment; furthermore, as the goes by, the odds of establishing a greener stable governmental politics are getting infinitesimally small. Lebanon's internal political crisis and external economic pressures have deeply affected its agricultural sector and food security. Lebanon is committed to developing a more resilient approach to the global food security crisis. The government has been actively working on national strategies to address food security. Lebanon is also recognizing that food security is not a national issue but a global one that requires cooperative solutions, and Lebanon acknowledges that solutions to this issue must be developed in collaboration with the internal community.

Lebanon remains committed to addressing the global food security crisis through international cooperation and national efforts by promoting sustainable agriculture, strengthening local food production and increasing international assistance and cooperation, Lebanon is pleading to contributing to a collective global effort to address the food security crisis. Lebanon believes that ECOSOC can play an important role in facilitating cooperation and providing effective solutions to this pressing global issue, because issues like this requires all the neighbouring countries as partners in trade.
